Janice Williams

Senior Services Coordinator

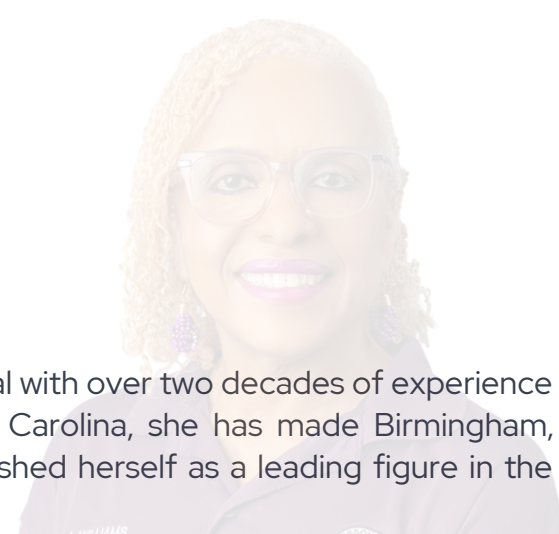

Meet Janice L. Williams, a dynamic and accomplished professional with over two decades of experience in serving the aging population. Hailing from Columbia, South Carolina, she has made Birmingham, Alabama her home for the past 37 years, where she has established herself as a leading figure in the field of senior citizen services.

As the Coordinator of Senior Citizen Services for the Senior Services Division of the Community Services Department of Jefferson County, Janice is on a mission to make a meaningful impact in the lives of seniors throughout Jefferson County. Her work revolves around providing health and education awareness, transportation services, and other valuable resources to empower seniors to live their lives to the fullest.

Over the course of her illustrious career, Janice has worked tirelessly to support caregivers and lead support groups, leveraging her expertise to improve the lives of those in need. Her passion for serving others is palpable, and her dedication to her craft has earned her the respect and admiration of colleagues and clients alike.

When she is not busy making a positive impact in her community, Janice enjoys indulging her passion for cooking, singing, decorating, and traveling. She is a devoted wife to her husband, the Rev. Charles B. Williams, Jr., pastor of St. Mark C.M.E. Church, and a proud mother of two young adult children, Charles III and Jessica.

Janice L. Williams is a true inspiration, a dedicated professional, and a shining example of the power of service and dedication to others. Her contributions to the field of senior citizen services have been invaluable, and her commitment to enhancing the lives of seniors will continue to make a difference for years to come.
